Betsy Spa and Wellness Garden

Rooftops in Miami are decidedly underused. With a few exceptions (Plunge, The Hotel and now The Webster), almost nobody uses them to their full potential. The owners of the recently renovated Betsy Hotel decided to change their roof status and thus complete their transformation from dowdy Betsy Ross to one of the hippest on the strip. The top of the hotel has been outfitted with teak decking divided into two distinct areas — one for a quaint bar with a front-row view of the ocean, and the other for an open-air spa christened the Betsy Spa and Wellness Garden. The spa space is small but chic, rather like the hotel itself, with an emphasis on natural products and materials. Stone and bamboo give the spa a distinct Zen feeling, while treatments like the Coconut Hot Towel Facial, the Mojito Mint Mani-Pedi and the Four-Handed Massage give guests a distinct feeling of bliss.
