DOGGY STUDIO &amp; BOUTIQUE

Aside from his obsession with non-organic bacon and occasional toxic emissions, your pooch is about as green as they come. So why not show him a little love with a trip to South Miami's Doggy Studio & Boutique? Photographer Shelly Guberek is finally celebrating the grand opening of her concept store, which has been taking studio-perfect shots of area pets since late last year. Her work has sold at Art Basel and been on exhibit at The Frost Museum, so don't think for a second that anything you could snap would ever come close to a photo by Guberek. It won't. Plus, she has the magic touch with dogs — she's able to calm the high-strung, elicit excitement from the aloof and teach manners to the unruly, just as she has done with her own adopted Weimaraner. After Fido finishes his sitting, indulge him in all kinds of unique products, toys and organic treats stocked by the boutique, while you review his cover-worthy poses.

MIAMI BEACH POLO WORLD CUP

Beautiful horses, handsome, sweaty polo players and champagne? Count us in! Polo is coming back to the beach for a three-day stint that begins with a horse parade and ends with a triumphant winner being crowned — all on Miami Beach's sandy shores behind The Setai. While the game that goes on here is not exactly regulation — a larger, lighter plastic ball is used — the players that duke it out are top-tier. Spectators may see Team China Grill whoop Team Audi's butt or vice versa, which adds to the excitement of it all. While it's true, some visitors are more interested by the bubbly and bites than the sport of kings, the best is to enjoy both. Individual tickets will cost $150, or $350 for all three days, but bikini and T-shirt-clad viewing from the sideline's general admission area is free.
