WHAT'S NEW

Ring Finger Studio

Perfectly poised in an airy upstairs studio in Midtown, this brand-new ring-only boutique is offering the soon-to-be betrothed something new: conflict-free diamonds set in eco-friendly settings created with 100 percent recycled precious metals. Eco-luxury aside, the real reason to visit Ring Finger Studio might be the array of settings and stones to choose from. Tara Rose, a recent New York transplant, opened the boutique to offer a more custom wedding/engagement ring buying experience. “Every other aspect of planning a wedding is so personal, but there aren’t many options when it comes to buying a ring,” she says. Rose put her 17 years of jewelry making and diamond grading to good use, educating her clients about the gems in a low-pressure environment, helping them create their dream ring by creating something new or customizing one of 150 settings, which she herself has designed. All the diamonds come with a United Nations Compliance Statement, in addition to the necessary gemological certifications, and optional laser serial number inscribing. Sound expensive? “Our rings start at $2,000, and our prices are very, very competitive,” Rose says with a smile. She should be smiling — her store offers two Cs more than the standard four: conscience and customization. In other words, it’s guilt-free luxury that proposes a fresh start and bright future in more ways than one.
