

VS MAKEUP

Need a perfect, smudgy, rich eyeliner? A luxurious slick for those pouty lips? Look no further than Victoria's Secret's awesome new VS Makeup line. While Victoria's Secret beauty products might evoke a sticky-sweet, glittery image (which still might apply to other products), this is an entirely different animal. An evolution of their popular Very Sexy line, VS Makeup has a sleek new look with black lacquered cases and clean right angles. There's even a VS Pro line for camera-ready necessities like brow grooming gel and eye shadow primer. Perhaps the best thing about VS Makeup is the quality-to-price ratio — silky smooth eye shadow quads that might run close to $40 in a comparable brand, cost a mere $15. Even the lip liner strikes that ever-elusive balance between being creamy enough to glide on and being dry enough to stay there. Kim Kardashian is already a fan — claiming the line as her favorite, and that girl knows her way around a bottle of foundation.

BABETTE EPAULETTE

With a little New York flair and Paris nightlife inspiration, designer Seville Michelle Anastos plans to change the fashion accessory world, one bare shoulder at a time. With her brand-new shoulder jewelry line, Babette Epaulette, Anastos introduces a new way for fashionable girls to bring attention to one of the sexiest parts of the body. Worn on the rise of the shoulder, the hand-crafted pieces add a military touch to any outfit. The three collections feature pieces adorned with feathers, fringe, studs and chains. The Tattoos and Stiletto collection evokes a bad-girl image. Anastos explains, "It's really just a personification of the strongest personality — intimidation. So when a woman walks in a room, she has a presence. Everyone notices a bad girl." Rounding out the line are Cigarettes and Eyeliner and Harlots and Scarlets; each piece has a uniqueness unlike any other accessory. The French would call them chef d'oeuvre, but Americans would simply call them a masterpiece.
